Not just personalized—it's personal

The Cognia Learning Community gives you an efficient way to provide differentiated learning for your staff members—and include them in the process. Leaders and individuals can choose from “Learning Labs” on timely topics of leadership and instructional practice.

Learning Labs provide:

- Self-directed and self-paced learning, available 24/7
- Templates and models for classroom implementation
- Ability to reach out for coaching from instructional leaders
- Embedded discussion board for extended exploration

“I think teachers are just really embracing the opportunity not only given the platform, but given the practices that Cognia has helped us employ. I just leaped right in—this is what we need!”

—Vanessa Diaz-Valencia, Hartford School District Assistant
Director of Curriculum, Instruction, & Programs

Adult learning model for impact

The Learning Labs instruction model is based on research on adult learning and The Model of Generative Change from Stanford University. Every Learning Lab incorporates the essentials of adult learning that stimulate creativity and change, in a sequence of four elements:

1. Spark—An introductory video to activate thinking about the topic
2. Reflect—A guided exploration of the importance of the topic, the individual's starting point, and consideration of new ideas
3. Tinker—An opportunity to experiment with new approaches—with suggested templates and models
4. Grow—Consider progress from the starting point and define next steps for change.

Built-in tools for leaders

Institution leaders can take advantage of dedicated topics in the Cognia Learning Community as individual learners. The platform also makes it easy to manage your team's learning. You can choose a specific topic or assemble a collection—a Learning Library—for a group or a staff member to tailor learning to your institution's goals or to individual needs. Plus, the platform offers easy reporting for progress monitoring by leaders and coaches.
